

Travel Insurance information for people with a urinary diversion

Thank you for your enquiry regarding Travel Insurance providers.

We carried out an internet search using a variety of key words such as Urinary stoma, bladder cancer, continence, reconstructive surgery in a search for suitable travel insurance.

After looking at a variety of websites and calling the individual companies, we have the following advice and suggestions. We asked for quotes for travel within Europe and world- wide on both single trips and annual multi-trip policies.

- Insurance will be tailored to your needs but don't forget that if you take out an annual multi trip policy you must inform them of any changes of circumstance or medical condition. If it is not declared you will not be covered.
- Go through a broker for the best rates.
- Speak directly to one of the company agents to discuss your individual needs. They will then be able to look for a quote which will best suit your requirements.
- If dealing with an independent company rather than a broker, do not accept the first quote you are given. It is sensible to get a range of quotes before deciding which company to use. Most quotes will be held for you for a given amount of time and you can get back to them if you find them the most favourable.
- If the company asks when you last had a cystoscopy click 0 or find the section which says, "bladder removed" and click on this. If you have difficulty with this step then call the agent and talk to an advisor.
- Compare single trip and multiple trip options. In some cases, single trip quotes may work out cheaper.

- It may be worth contacting your bank as many of them now provide travel insurance at competitive rates. However, do check the exact cover given.

Find below a list of suggested websites. This is not a definitive list – we would be keen to hear from members who have used other companies that they would recommend.
